PROTECTION UNDER THE LAW

The “Idaho Protection of Public Employees Act” (Title 6, Chapter 21) provides protections from “adverse action” for state employees who, in good faith, provide information concerning the waste of public funds, resources or manpower or who report potential violations of laws and regulations (both state and federal). This law protects state employees who participate in investigations, court cases, or administrative reviews associated with such activity. It also protects employees who refuse to carry out or object to directives to commit an illegal act. State employees cannot be unreasonably restricted from documenting such cases.

Other federal and state laws also provide protection to individuals who report waste of government funds and/or violations of law. Persons who are concerned about such protections should contact their legal advisor.

REPORTING

We need your help to identify and resolve issues of fraud, waste, abuse, and illegal acts. Several options are available to all University employees and students who wish to report known or suspected cases such activity. Do not investigate the activity yourself, but do provide as much detail as possible.

Information can be passed to the following:
- Your supervisor or department head
- The University Reporting Hotline
- Directly to Internal Audit And Advisory Services (see below)
- University Counsel
- University Human Resources

Anonymity and Confidentiality

Tips can be made anonymously to Internal Audit and Advisory Services. All information received by us is treated as “sensitive” and information will only be revealed to persons on a need to know basis. Other areas have their own procedures on handling information. Check with those areas to find out how they handle anonymity and confidentiality.

THINK BEFORE YOU SPEAK!

Before making an allegation of fraud, waste or abuse, be reasonably certain of any claims. Allegations can seriously and negatively impact the accused individual's life and reputation. They can also damage the reputation of the University.

FRAUD, WASTE, and ABUSE

Examples of Fraud, Waste, & Abuse

Fraud
A dishonest and deliberate course of action that results in the obtaining of money, property or an advantage to which the person committing the action would not normally be entitled. Intentional misleading or deceitful conduct that deprives another of his/her resources or rights. Fraud always involves intent and some violation of trust.

Fraud in the workplace is referred to as “occupational fraud”, and is one type of fraud. It can be as simple as pilferage of office supplies or as complex as a sophisticated financial statement fraud.

Waste
Waste occurs when someone makes careless or extravagant expenditures, incurs unnecessary expenses, or grossly mismanages resources. This activity results in unnecessary costs. It may or may not provide the person with personal gain. Waste is almost always the result of poor management decisions and practices or poor accounting controls.

Abuse
Abuse most often involves an employee exploiting “loopholes” in policies and procedures for personal benefit. Abuse is very close to fraud, but often is not prosecutable as such. Abuse includes, but is not limited to the misuse or destruction of resources, using the powers of an official position inappropriately, or any other seriously improper practice that cannot be prosecuted as a fraud or other illegal act.

Example 1
- An employee purchases a meal for a meeting which has a valid business purpose. The meal meets University policy, all receipts are provided and the University meal and entertainment form is complete. (Acceptable)
- The employee has a meeting with a valid business purpose. A meal is purchased, receipts are provided and required forms are completed. However, the meeting could've taken place without a meal. (Waste)
- The employee purchases a meal over a casual meeting with colleagues. The business purpose and necessity of the meeting is questionable. (Abuse)
- The employee purchases lunch for himself/herself and friends using University funds. (Fraud)

Example 2
- An employee purchases a needed piece of software to complete his University work. (Acceptable)
- The employee purchases needed software for business use. However, a different piece of software was available that would meet the needs and was of lesser cost. (Waste)
- The employee purchases software that has limited business use, and primarily uses the software for personal work. (Abuse)
- The employee purchases software. The software is not used for work, but is taken home and used for personal use. (Fraud)

Example 3
- An employee uses sick leave in accordance with University policy. (Acceptable)
- The employee uses sick leave as vacation. (Waste)
- The employee uses all of his/her sick leave as vacation, and then requests additional hours from the shared leave pool. (Abuse)
- The employee is absent from work and intentionally does not report leave time in accordance with HRS policies and procedures. (Fraud)

What Does It Cost?
Determining the total cost of fraud, waste, and abuse is most likely an impossible task. Fraud and abuse often involve concealment which means much of the activity goes unreported and/or undetected.

According to the “2006 ACFE Report to the Nation” put out by the Association of Certified Fraud Examiners, it is estimated that 5% of an organization’s total revenues is lost to occupational fraud and abuse. Keep in mind, this rate is based on only known cases of fraud and does not include activities that are “wasteful”.

Costs associate with fraud, waste, and abuse result in decreased wages, higher costs to customers, lower profits, and fewer resources available for new programs or the expansion of old ones.

How can fraud, waste, & abuse be prevented?
It is impossible to stop all fraud, waste, and abuse. However, a number of things can be done to help prevent and reduce such activity. For example:
- Reduce opportunities through strong internal control
- Create a sense of honesty and ethics in your area.
- Report fraud, waste, and abuse when it is detected
- Require employees to look for ways to eliminate this activity

Many fraudsters steal because they feel unappreciated or because they have a financial or other problem they are reluctant to share with others. Listening to your coworkers, employees, and others as well as recognizing their achievements creates a more enjoyable workplace. It also helps to prevent fraud by eliminating some of the feelings that contribute to a person’s decision to steal.
